Fall Greetings from your President:

The current newsletter should be a bit more visually stimulating than usual. We're enclosing images of the members who are in the running to create a new AMSA collectible medal. The styles are varied and exhibit a miscellaneous sense of design. This is one of the reasons I enjoy my involvement with AMSA. Our collective talent is up to par with any other medallic organization in the world.

If you recall from past newsletters, this time we're letting the entire membership get involved by having all of you vote on your favorite piece of medallic sculpture.

This seems to be the best way to arrive at something we can collectively feel represents us aesthetically at this point in time. Who knows what the future will bring in terms of materials and techniques that may be useful to those of us who chose to create these gems of expressed thoughts, but for now, we're going to cast the chosen piece in bronze and hopefully find those collectors who value our efforts!

We should be set up soon to allow for online voting at our site: <http://www.amsamedals.org>.

At this time we're working with our webmaster and AMSA member Enrique Moriero to publish the images at our site and set up a voting system there. Since this is new to us, another option you might choose is to simply e-mail or snail mail your choice to our secretary Ann-Lise Deering. Anonymity isn't an issue here, so decide which medal is your favorite and let us know. We also have some votes that were generated at the ANA convention in Denver recently where we exhibited images of the submitted artwork. We were interested in getting feedback from those ANA members who could be potential collectors.

So take your time and choose the medallic sculpture you feel is a good choice to send out into the world as an AMSA representative. The world really does need our creations, especially in these times of turmoil and confusion. Perhaps our plastic thoughts can relieve some tension and elevate other minds to a calmer place.

AMSA members exhibit at the Birmingham Historical Museum.

Mark Benvenuto that was in charge of the show at Padded Cell last year is working with Leslie Mio, Museum Assistant at Birmingham Historical Museum to have an AMSA members medallic exhibit there next year, from February 3 to June 16 of 2007.

The Birmingham Historical Museum & Park is a marvelous place for a show with the kind of atmosphere to attract potential collectors that might want to purchase our artwork.

The museum would like to produce a catalog with a contact for purchasing the items and will have the budget to co-produce postcards and other materials. The exhibit will run from February 3, to June 16, 2007 and the opening reception will be on Thursday, February 1. Workshops with art students are in the planning and more information about that later.

A separate mailing with show prospectus and application will go out in a couple of weeks.

Eugene Daub designs new medal for the Jewish-American Hall of Fame.

The Moe Berg medal is the 37th issue in what is now the longest continuing series of art medals in America and was designed by AMSA member Eugene Daub. Eugene designed the obverse as a jigsaw puzzle portrait with one piece missing -- indicating the mystery surrounding the life of the honoree.

Morris "Moe" Berg was born in New York City on March 2, 1902. He was fortunate enough to grow up and do two things in life he really enjoyed -- playing baseball and being an intelligence officer!

Moe majored in modern languages at Princeton University, where he played on a championship baseball team. After graduating in 1923, he played for the Brooklyn Dodgers as a first baseman. Later, while attending Columbia Law School, Berg joined the Chicago White Sox, initially as shortstop but later as catcher. He later played for the Cleveland Indians, the Washington Senators, and the Boston Red Sox. Berg set an American League record by catching in 117 consecutive games from 1931-1934 without making an error.

In 1934, Moe Berg, along with players such as Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, toured Japan with an American all-star baseball team ... in spite of the fact that Casey Stengel is reported to have said that "Berg could speak in 8 languages, but couldn't hit in any of them." The government asked him to make some films of Tokyo Harbor and some military installations while he was there, and these purportedly helped in the Doolittle Raids.

In 1938, Berg appeared on the radio quiz show "Information, Please!" It was these appearances that really made him nationally known. He was dazzling, and NBC received as many as 24,000 letters calling for his return.

He would appear twice more.

After the OSS was dissolved in 1945, Moe Berg served on the staff of NATO's Advisory Group for Aeronautical Research and Development. He was awarded the Medal of Freedom by the United States in 1946, but modesty led him to return it. Moe Berg may not be in the Baseball Hall of Fame, but he is the only baseball player honored by both the CIA Hall of Fame and the International Spy Museum!

What is F.I.D.E.M.?

F.I.D.E.M., the International Medal Federation, was established in 1937. Its aims are to promote and diffuse the art of medals at international level, to make the art known and to guarantee recognition of its place among other arts by increasing awareness of the art, history and technology of medals, mainly through publications and the organization of international events. F.I.D.E.M. also organizes a congress every two years and an international exhibition of the art of medals in order to promote exchanges among artists and to make their work known internationally.

F.I.D.E.M. operates in over 30 countries worldwide. It is represented by a delegate and a vice-delegate in every country, who maintain regular contact with the artists, F.I.D.E.M. members and other people interested in the art of medals from their own country.

F.I.D.E.M. publishes the magazine Medailles, which contains information on F.I.D.E.M. activities and the minutes of each congress. Members receive this free of charge.

F.I.D.E.M. members also receive The Medal magazine, which is normally published twice a year.

News From Medialia..
Rack and Hamper Gallery and New Approach, Inc.

The Saturday, September 16th reception at Medialia, in New York's former Garment District, marked the beginning of the gallery's 2006-2007 season.

Showing in Space I

Whispers in the Wind, a one-person exhibition showcasing Mashiko's medallic sculpture and book art.

Showing in Space II

Tattooed Bird Boxes: A Traveler's Memo of Nature, a one-person exhibition by Rimer Cardillo.

Both exhibitions will be open until October 28th.

Culminating a decade long pursuit for the promotion of medallic art, the September 9th reception was also the first time the NEW APPROACH CONTEMPORARY MEDALLIC SCULPTURE COLLECTION AND RESEARCH CENTER was open to the public.

Construction of Medialia's newest addition began June 25, the last day of the 2005-2006 gallery season. The official opening reception of the Collection and Research Center will be on Saturday, December 9, 2006, coinciding with the opening of the 2006-2007 NEW IDEAS in MEDALLIC SCULPTURE exhibition. This will be the ninth annual opening of this internationally traveling exhibition project.

Every year a participating University of the Arts, Philadelphia (UArts) student is commissioned to create a commemorative sculpture for the NEW IDEAS exhibition project.

This year, Alex W. Gartlemann has created a matchbox sculpture from bonded bronze. Titled, "AS PLANNED," the piece measures 96 x 111 x 44mm, and is inscribed with an excerpt from a Frank O'Hara poem: "We do what you know because what else is there?"

Contributors to New Approach of $150 or more will receive this commemorative sculpture.

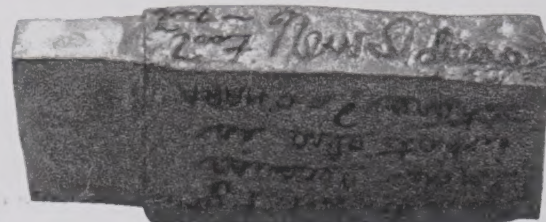

New Approach is a 501(c) charitable organization that was founded by Mashiko Nakashima for the preservation and promotion of contemporary medallic art.

With the financial and moral support of patrons worldwide, she has striven to expose young generations of artists, from every discipline, to this art form that is both traditional and modern

It is through this organization that the NEW IDEAS project has been possible, as well as the Collection and Research Center, and the International Medallic Sculpture Competition for Emerging Artists.

AMSA members' directory update

The planning of the directory is coming along and we are looking for estimates of printing costs to see what we can afford.

Everyone that is a paid member of AMSA has the opportunity to be included if they choose to, regardless of whether they are an artist, collector, foundry, mint or other.

Each member can include a photo of themselves as well as an image of a medal or something appropriate to their interest. A mint or supplier may decide on something more specific to their field. We still need to determine the cost of producing this directory and what additional charge to members there will be to cover costs. We would like everyone to be included and there will be different categories like artists, collectors, dealers, producers, mints, suppliers etc...

We are looking for suggestions and proposals for a cover design etc. so please speak up if you like to get involved and have ideas for making this a splendid directory. The deadline for submitting your entries is January 7th - 2007 so start thinking about what you want to say about yourself and what work you want to promote. We want to have this directory finished well in advanced of the FIDEM congress in September to hand out to the congress participants.

Send your material or questions to Anne-Lise, e-mail: <AMSAnews@verizon.net >

“A Whisper in the Wind”...

A report of the one-person exhibition showing Mashiko's medallic sculpture and book art ..... by Bev Mazze

At last the Medialia ... Rack and Hamper Gallery is showcasing works by Mashiko. She's well known to AMSA members for curating exhibitions of medallic sculpture from around the world. She's equally well known to us as teacher and champion of young sculptors who enthusiastically are exploring the challenges and rewards of expressing themselves through medallic sculpture.

Mashiko's body of work is not so well known to AMSA members, even though she has been exhibiting in the US and abroad for many years. The medallic sculpture and “book art” she chose for Medialia's “Whisper in the Wind” exhibition gives us the opportunity to get to know her better as an artist.

For example, we now see the variety of mediums in which she works: stone, metal, glass, wood, canvas, acrylic, acetate, paper. And it doesn't take long to observe that Mashiko pushes the boundaries of medallic sculpture well past its traditional definitional boundaries.

The smallest medallic objects fit lightly in the hand; a tree trunk turned into an organic, almost erotic, piece of sculpture alerts us that larger carvings are around—in fact, just a short walk into the living space of this loft in Manhattan's garment district. Last week I had the opportunity to spend a few hours studying Mashiko's work, and I'd like to share with you some thoughts on what I saw and felt in the quiet of that evening.

In the carved white alabaster [N-3] (on the right), that I saw framed in black metal in the living space, shoots of vegetation, swollen with life, seem to have burst from the earth to play in the wind.

The mysteries of nature also inspired the subtle cast bronze medal “A Whisper in the Wind” (on the left) that is the signature piece of the Medialia exhibit. On the obverse, leaves whisper invitingly as the wind is caught in a swirl by canopy, trunk, and roots of a tree. The wind swirl draws the eye into its intriguing center; yet the obverse reveals only the grain of the wood. Gradually I became aware of other recurring elements: portals, stairs, and a small round object that seems to symbolize movement, or a journey, or someone on a journey.

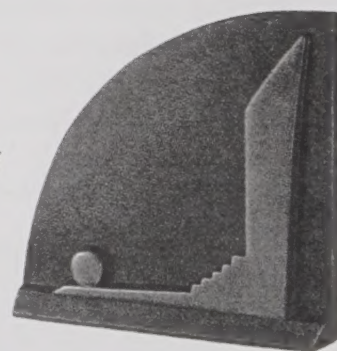

“Quiescence II” (on the right) is a cast medal that could qualify as book art in a nontraditional medium. The open bronze “covers” (obverse) form a wall with a closed portal that shields the traveler (a ball resting at the bottom of an incline) in a tree-shadowed secret garden. The reverse is the outside of the garden wall.

In the struck bronze “Millennium” medal, momentum causes the last few seconds of 1999 to drop away and roll down a set of stairs into the new millennium (obverse shown on the right).

The reverse contains only the commemorative legend.

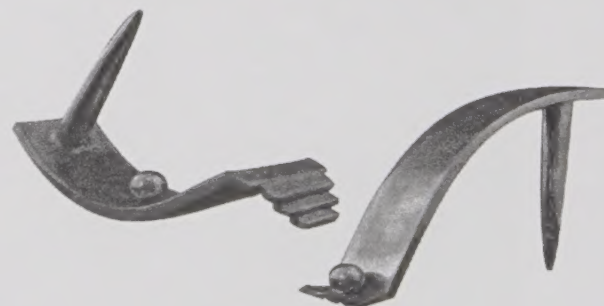

“A Ship to Beyond” redefines the obverse and reverse “sides” of a medal. From a highly polished bronze deck, the traveler sets sail. Turning the deck (obverse) over reveals (reverse) a shiny departure slide and set of stairs with the traveler about to debark to explore beyond. (shown below, right).

“At the Palace”

Finally, between the covers of a piece of true book art titled “At the Palace”, the traveler wanders down a silk-screened central corridor with many portals on either side that seem to sway invitingly with the promise of treasures beyond.

You still have time to catch the exhibition, as it will stay open until October 28, 2006.

Dora de Pédery-Hunt at George Faludy Place

On Tuesday, September 3, 2006 a parkette was dedicated in Toronto to Hungarian- Canadian Poet, George Faludy. Mr. Faludy had lived in Canada for over 20 years and became a Canadian citizen. Known as Hungary's greatest modern poet, he led a turbulent life fleeing first from an ultra-conservative government and later from the Communist dictatorship that had made him a non-person for four decades. His three years in Recsk, Hungary's notorious Communist labour camp are painfully recreated in My Happy Days in Hell.

Just before Paris fell to the Nazis he fled to Morocco. In 1941 he accepted an invitation from President Franklin D. Roosevelt to live in the United States and served in the U.S. military during WWII.

George was a close friend of Dora de Pédery-Hunt. Ms. Hunt created a relief portrait of Mr. Faludy for the plinth. The relief was based on a medal that she had created in 1975.

Mr. Faludy died in Budapest, Hungary on September 1, 2006. He was buried in Budapest's Flumei uti cemetery in an area reserved for leading writers and artists.

Do you want to be featured in the AMSA On Line Directory ?

If you are a member in good standing and want to be listed, you can do it for free.

Just send us a picture of yourself or your art with your name and contact information to:

<amsaonline@yahoo.es>. Every paid member can do this, just the same as for the annual membership list.

For snail-mail address and further directions, please check the website for instructions or write or call the secretary, ph. 206-542-0608 for instructions on how to submit your non returnable material.

The directory will include sculptors, collectors, scholars, manufacturers, and all members in general, featuring content on medallic art. Our organization would also love to provide online presence to all members through individual pages built and hosted by AMSA. Your AMSA portfolios will include a personal resume and a brief statement or company profile with contact, addresses, links, and up to eight images. All AMSA members who do not have their own website and wish to have their mini web page published by AMSA, now have the opportunity at a very reasonable price.

This is particularly interesting for members who don't have a website. For those that already have their own website e-mail your link to: <amsaonline@yahoo.es> This service is free to paid up members.

As the years pass, I am compelled to understand that violence will never vanish from our lives and that hate seems to overcome any hope for understanding... On the obverse of the medal, one can see from a distance a seemingly naïve nature scene. Apparently, from a closer look, it is understood that this scene consists of guns and weapons, which seem to flourish naturally instead of flowers and trees. I watch the abnormal nature of our life with a great sadness and see a grenade replaces the sun, and a barbed wire stands for the horizon. I know that by destroying the hope for a safe ground we are left with the cracked earth on the reverse.
